

whelming victory and accept no peace but unconditional surrender. Our whole effort must be to bring Germany to her knees and to put a stop once for all to her threat of world dominion; and to do this we must imUHt upon a unified citizenship at home. There Is no room in this country for loyalty to but one flag—the American flag—and therefore no room for loyalty to any other flag, and still loss the black or red flag.*¹

He had promised to make one speech in New York City in support of the Republican ticket in the State election, and October 28 had been, fixed as the date for this in Carnegie Hall. His speech had been prepared and advance copies of it sent to the press when, on October 26, President Wilson published an appeal to the voters of the country to elect a Democratic majority In both Houses of Congress at the approaching November election. Roosevelt at once prepared an addendum to his address In which he discuHBod the appeal, thus increasing materially the length of his remarks. He spoke for two hours and a quarter and held the undivided and enthusiastic attention of his audience to the clone. Never had his wonderful powers of mastery over a great audience been more signally displayed. From tho beginning to the end, he did not for a moment lose his hold upon it, Never had he appeared to be in better physical condition, and rarely had his mental powers appeared to be more vigorous and alert. He began his speech by Baying:

"I have been cautioned three times to-day not to be extreme in what I say to-night. The trouble is that my ex-tremeness one year is another person's moderation later.

But I won't be extreme to-night. By that I mean I won't go beyond the point I ought to go. There will be one advantage in what I say, however. You'll understand it and you won't need any key. You won't get a letter from me day after to-morrow explaining what I meant"

When a voice from the gallery shouted:
"Three cheers for the fighting man!" he instantly raised his hand and exclaimed: "Don't cheer for me. I'd have been in the fight"
